ORDER

(Order of the Court was made by P.D.DINAKARAN,J.)

The petitioner is the mother of the detenu, Athi @ Sathishkumar, son of Panneerselvam. The detenu was incarcerated by order dated 4.5.2007 of the second respondent under the provisions of the Tamil Nadu Prevention of Dangerous Activities of Bootleggers, Drug Offenders, Forest Offenders, Goondas, Immoral Traffic Offenders, Sand Offenders, Slum Grabbers and Video Pirates Act, 1982 (Tamil Nadu Act 14 of 1982) branding him as a Goonda. Hence, the petitioner seeks a writ of Habeas Corpus to call for the records in connection with the order of detention passed by the second respondent dated 4.5.2007 in Memo No.191/BDFGISSV/2007 against her son Athi @ Sathish Kumar, who is now confined at Central Prison, Chennai, to set aside the same and to direct the respondents to produce the above said detenu before this Court and set him at liberty.

2. The order of detention dated 4.5.2007 came to be passed based on the ground case said to have taken place on 19.4.2007 at about 6.15 p.m., when one Balu, who was running a fast food shop at No.294, Royapettah Main Road, Chennai, was doing his business, the detenu demanded mamool by uttering filthy words. When the complainant refused to give money by saying that he had opened the shop now only, the detenu caught hold of his shirt and beat him over his left cheek with his hand. The detenu voluntarily opened the cash box and took away Rs.230/-. The complainant raised hue and cry. Immediately, the detenu took out a knife from his hip and rushed to cut the complainant over his head. As Balu moved in the backward, the knife fell over his left cheek and caused bleeding injury. The public nearby tried to apprehend him on the spot, but the detenu picked up cool drink bottles from the nearby shop and hurled the same against them by uttering filthy words. The bottles fell down on the road, broken into pieces and the pieces scattered all over the road. The public ran to safer places out of fear of danger to their lives and properties, and thus the detenu created terror and panic at the spot. In the melee, the detenu escaped from the spot. Based on the complaint lodged by Balu, a case was registered in Crime No.279 of 2007 on the file of E2 Royapettah Police Station for the offences punishable under Sections 341, 323, 384, 307, 427, 336 and 506(ii) IPC.

3. The second respondent, taking note of the above case as a ground case and finding that there are three adverse cases pending against the detenu, having satisfied that there is a compelling necessity to detain him in order to prevent him from indulging in the activities which are prejudicial to the maintenance of public order, ordered his detention dubbing him as a Goonda.

4. The learned counsel for the petitioner challenges the impugned order of detention only on the ground of delay in preparing the rejection order.

5.1. Before delving into the issue relating to the delay as contended above, it would be apt to refer the law on the point.

5.2. Article 22(5) of the Constitution of India suggests that the obligation of the government is to offer the detenu an opportunity of making a representation against the order, before it is confirmed according to the procedure laid down under the relevant provisions of law, vide K.M. Abdulla Kunhi v. Union of India, (1991) 1 SCC 476 .

5.3. The right to representation under Article 22(5) of the Constitution of India includes right to expeditious disposal by the State Government. Expedition is the rule and delay defeats mandate of Article 22 (5) of the Constitution of India, vide Ram Sukrya Mhatre v. R.D. Tyagi, 1992 Supp (3) SCC 65.

5.4. Any inordinate and unexplained delay on the part of the Government in considering the representation renders the detention illegal, vide Tara Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (1980) 2 SCC 321 and Raghavendra Singh v. Supdt., Distt. Jail, (1986) 1 SCC 650.

5.5. It is a constitutional obligation of the Government to consider the representation forwarded by the detenu without any delay. Though no period is prescribed by Article 22 of the Constitution for the decision to be taken on the representation, the words "as soon as may be" in clause (5) of Article 22 convey the message that the representation should be considered and disposed of at the earliest. But that does not mean that the authority is pre-empted from explaining any delay which would have occasioned in the disposal of the representation. The court can certainly consider whether the delay was occasioned due to permissible reasons or unavoidable causes. If delay was caused on account of any indifference or lapse in considering the representation, such delay will adversely affect further detention of the prisoner. In other words, it is for the authority concerned to explain the delay, if any, in disposing of the representation. It is not enough to say that the delay was very short. Even longer delay can as well be explained. So the test is not the duration or range of delay, but how it is explained by the authority concerned. Even the reason that the Minister was on tour and hence there was a delay of five days in disposing of the representation was rejected by the Apex Court holding that when the liberty of a citizen guaranteed under Article 21 of the Constitution of India is involved, the absence of the Minister at head quarters is not sufficient to justify the delay, since the file could be reached the Minister with utmost promptitude in cases involving the vitally important fundamental right of a citizen, vide Rajammal v. State of T.N., (1999) 1 SCC 417.

6. Coming to the case on hand, admittedly, objecting to the order of detention dated 4.5.2007, a representation was made on behalf of the detenu on 9.7.2007, which was received by the Government on 19.7.2007. Remarks were called for from the detaining authority on 20.7.2007, which was received by the detaining authority on 23.7.2007. The detaining authority, in turn, called for parawar remarks from the sponsoring authority on 24.7.2007 and on receipt of the same on 27.7.2007, the detaining authority sent it to the Government on 1.8.2007 and the same was received on 3.8.2007. Thereafter, the file was submitted on 6.8.2007 and the same was considered by the Under Secretary and Additional Secretary on 6.8.2007 itself. The file was considered by the Minister on 7.8.2007. However, the rejection letter was prepared on 14.8.2007, after a delay of seven days, which is not properly explained. Even taking note of the intervening holidays, viz., 11.8.2007 and 12.8.2007 (being Saturday and Sunday), the delay of five days in preparing the order of rejection, is admittedly unexplained and inexcusable. Thereafter, the order of rejection was sent on 17.8.2007 and served on the detenu on 18.8.2007.

7. At this juncture, a reference to the decision of the Apex Court in Kundanbhai Dulabhai Sheikh v District Magistrate, Ahmedabad, (1996) 3 SCC 194 is apposite:

"In spite of law laid down above by this Court repeatedly over the past three decades, the Executive, namely, the State Government and its officers continue to behave in their old, lethargic fashion and like all other files rusting in the Secretariat for various reasons including red-tapism, the representation made by a person deprived of his liberty, continue to be dealt with in the same fashion. The Government and its officers will not give up their habit of maintaining a consistent attitude of lethargy. So also, this Court will not hesitate in quashing the order of detention to restore the 'liberty and freedom' to the person whose detention is allowed to become bad by the Government itself on account of his representation not being disposed of at the earliest."

8. That apart, it is a settled law that there should not be supine indifference, slackness or callous attitude in considering the representation. Any unexplained delay in the disposal of representation would be a breach of the constitutional imperative and it would render the continued detention impermissible and illegal, vide K.M. Abdulla Kunhi v. Union of India, (1991) 1 SCC 476.

9. In the instant case, there is delay of five days in preparing the order of rejection, as referred to above, and the same, in our considered opinion, vitiates the impugned order of detention. We are, therefore, inclined to allow this petition.

In the result, the order of detention dated 4.5.2007 is set aside. The detenu is directed to be set at liberty forthwith unless his presence is required in connection with any other case.
